

There are only three of us left - the only three left alive in the world. It all started on March 2nd when me and my 2 friends went into the woods. It was supposed to be a usual trip, we were going on such quite often. This one was really different.

When we were walking on a path we knew really well, we noticed a house that had never been there before. We decided to investigate it. We went in and the furniture looked unbelievably old considering the house must have appeared not so long ago. We noticed some stairs to the basement so we went to look for something interesting there. To our surprise, there was some kind of a portal. It was glowing red and behaved kind of like a mirror. Together we decided that we shouldn't go through the portal but as I was saying this aloud the portal sucked us all in. No one remembers what really happened but suddenly we got thrown out of the portal in the exact basement we were in before. It seemed like nothing had changed at all but we thought that we have to tell someone about the discovery. We immediately ran to the local police station, but it was completely empty. "What happened?" - we all thought - "It's impossible that this police station would be empty...". As looking for anyone there seemed pointless we considered going to a nearest supermarket. We thought that someone had to be there. And so we did. When we arrived there, we noticed the parking lot was full of parked cars. We felt kind of relieved. We entered the supermarket and guess what? It was completely empty.

It was the time we got concerned. No one knew what happened. No one believed that this was happening for real, that it wasn't a dream. One friend started panicking. We asked him what he was panicking about. He said that he knew what had happened. "The portal moved us to another dimension" he said. We were all looking at him in shock and disbelief. Though we didn't want to believe him, that was the truth, we were in another world. It was at that moment we realised we were all alone. There's just three of us left alive in the world...
