

Write a short story (about 200 -250 words) on topic: "A spine-chilling situation during online learning this year" including words: scissors, plushy, teacher, shine, shoelace, vomit.

As usual, I woke up just as the online lessons were about to begin. 'Not this nightmare again' - I thought and I went to the kitchen in order to make this magnificent beverage, which is a hot and bitter coffee. I obviously was late for the first lesson so I started to browse through the group chat and realised there was something wrong. I quickly logged into the lesson and I immediately screamed. Half of my classmates' cameras were turned on and they showed nothing but their dead bodies. One of them had scissors stuck in his throat, the other one had a plushy thingy coming out of the eyeball and that was it. I couldn't hold it back longer, I started to vomit all over my room. When I looked at the screen I noticed some changes, another camera was turned on and I recognized my friend but at the same moment he was being murdered. A person in a dark hoodie was choking him with a shoelace and as soon as he killed him, he whispered my name and said that I was the next. Seconds later I heard some noises downstairs. I was vulnerable, so I simply asked him - 'Why?!'. He took the mask off of his face and I recognized my high school teacher who just said "I told you to turn on the camera..." and the last thing I can recall is the shine of a blade...
